To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing this reference for Marie Zamecnikova, who is applying for a position at your company. Marie worked for me over the summer as a J-1 US Visa student at my retail store on Pier 56 of Seattle famous Waterfront, which welcomes over 16 million visitors a year. Her responsibilities included stocking the store, helping and answering customer's question, running a cash register and maintaining overall customer satisfaction. Based on Marie's work, excellent attendance and overall attitude, I would rate her job performance as excellent.

Marie Zamecnikova has a number of strengths to offer an employer. She is always interested in speaking with customers and talking about Seattle and the things people can do and see while they are here. Her greatest strength is definitely her communication skills. She prides herself on her English language ability and continues to learn and grow. She enjoys meeting new people is always friendly and communicative. She is also a very fast learner who takes on tasks whenever they are given. Marie is witty, dependable and an employee that was nice to have over the summer.

In conclusion, I would highly recommend Marie Zamecnikova. If she were to find a job in her field of study she would be an excellent employee and an extremely positive addition to any organization. If you need any additional information, please feel free to contact me at any time.

Sincerely,

Jay Ashberg
